Hugo Chavez: What Now ?

Although not unexpected, the Venezuelan president's death leaves the oil-rich South American country with deep divisions and uncertain prospects, beset by fierce social divisions, high unemployment, alarming crime, a beleaguered press, and few economic resources other than petroleum.

Vice President Nicolas Maduro says Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez has died at age 58. The populist leader of oil-rich Venezuela became Latin America's most vocal and controversial leader and was Washington's chief antagonist in the region. Venezuela's foreign minister announced seven days of mourning late Tuesday, with a state funeral to be held Friday.

An election will be held in 30 days and Vice-President Nicolas Maduro, Chavez's designated successor, will temporarily assume power in the meantime.

His deification and demonization has already begun, and one can expect an ungodly scuffle behind the scenes in the coming weeks over the country's energy reserves, the largest in the Western hemisphere.

That Venezuela is richly endowed with petroleum assets is verified by no less an authority than the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the organization's 81.33 percent of the globe's known oil reserves Venezuela had 24.8 percent, exceeding Saudi Arabia with 22.2 percent.

According to the U.S. Energy Administration, the United States total crude oil imports now average 9.033 million barrels per day, with the top five exporting countries being Canada (2.666 mbpd), Mexico (1.319 mbpd), Saudi Arabia (1.107 mbpd), with Venezuela in fourth place at 930,000 barrels per day.

Despite the primacy of Venezuelan oil sales to the U.S. Caracas is shifting gears however, and China will soon to become Venezuela's main trade partner, as oil sales surged 60 percent in 2012.

Hugo Chavez: What Now ?

Whatever one thought of President Chávez's politics, he was Venezuela's first head of state to have come up from the laboring classes of the country's marginalized indigenous people by dint of hard work, ambition and character. His administration accordingly focused massive efforts to alleviate the appalling poverty afflicting Venezuela's lower classes, in turn earning the enmity of the country's political and business elites.

As the administration needed increased oil revenues to fund its social program, in February 2007 Chávez announced a new decree to nationalize the last remaining oil production sites that were under foreign majority company control, to take effect on 1 May, allowing the foreign companies to negotiate the nationalization terms. Under the new regulations, the earlier joint ventures, involving ExxonMobil (NYSE: XOM), ChevronTexaco (NYSE: CVX), Statoil, ConocoPhillips (NYSE: COP) and BP (NYSE: BP), were transformed to give the state-owned energy firm Petroleos de Venezuela S.A. (PDVSA), minimum 60 percent stake. The process completed a government initiative begun in 2005, when the Chávez administration transformed earlier "operating agreements" in Venezuela's older oil fields into joint ventures with foreign companies. Thirty out of 32 such operating agreements were transformed, with only two being challenged in court. Most foreign companies accepted the new arrangements, including Chevron, Statoil, Total and BP, but America's ExxonMobil and ConocoPhillips refused.

Simply put, on the issue of whether Venezuela's oil wealth would go to the people or the elite, Chávez came down in favor of the former.

If these policies hit foreign oil companies, used to having their way in the Third World in the pocketbook, the social policies that Chávez has implemented to benefit Venezuelans had a strongly socialist tinge that, even worse offered an alternative to Washington's free market proscriptions. Case in point - Venezuela's health care system. A joint Cuban-Venezuelan medical program, "Barrio Adentro," has made health care free and accessible to all Venezuelans. Founded in 2003, Barrio Adentro expanded Venezuela's national health care system by employing more than 30,000 Cuban medical professionals as the government equipped clinics and hospitals with advanced high technology diagnostic and surgical equipment.

Is there more Good Broker's than Bad One's

FEM has come to the conclusion that there is more good trader's than bad traders, we also wish to think most trader's is good and honorable in their transactions.

Without these thoughts we will all fail and lose a great industry to be in, everyone can improve and learn more about the commodity industry just by listening to their peers.

FEM believes that if there is a bad trader, then he or she is someone who does not think wisely.

A bad trader is someone that because of money becomes too greedy. Or a bad trader is someone who only believes in himself and does not have plans other than being materialistic in every way.

FEM can say, when bad trader's takes high risk's and wants stack an rack deals without doing any due diligence, for more money as quickly as possible, when they become this greedy and loses all or half of the time they have invested in making calls also loses good deals because there not concentrating on the real deals that might take a bit more time,

All the good traders in this industry should be mature enough to know how to look at a good deal that is appropriate for their client and his profit and losses; on the other point a bad broker can show certain slackness in his product, where he would eventually lose products or make losses

So yes it is true there is a good broker's (they does exist, of course) who can offer invaluable counsel, especially if you lack the experience needed in this industry, you have to decide for yourself how much help you really need to contribute and how much you're willing to do for the industry you're in as a buyer or seller....

Is there more Good Broker's than Bad One's

We all have seen what's happening in commodity today, where legitimate brokers get skunked by doing the right thing to make the deal happen, these are the pitfall we all have to bear with each day.

The truth is, the when sensitive information get's in the hands of brokers, this leave themselves open to attack's from all corner's. Too often, does buyer and sellers receive horror stories abound about the unscrupulous brokers and companies who induce to buy or sell.

Worse still are the ones who try to sell's products with high commissions and mediocre returns.

With the bad brokers, you pretty much get what you pay for -- no advice, no research, no hand-holding. And in the case of online brokers it can get even worse: clogged servers, missing checks and hour-long waits on customer service lines.

FEM's is able to view that there will be new competition with better brokers buyers and sellers sides in the end, meaning investors will get improved service for lower costs.

The following is seen as a bad brokers, one who goes against his trading procedures, one who always trade even when it is unnecessary, one don't want to learn who thinks he knows it all.

bad brokers are those who do not learn from the mistakes he has done, and continues to repeat that mistake in brokering deals. we should be able to trade the right way, and can learn from the experience we have, it will increase the capacity we have.

A broker who starts trading without experience is a not a real broker, a good brokers always learn about their trade from other good traders who is well respected or knowledgeable in the industry.

Iberia and fuel costs hit profits from BA-owner IAG International Consolidated Airlines Group SA (CDI)

LAST UPDATED AT 01 MAR 2013, 16:30 *CHART SHOWS LOCAL TIME

Restructuring charges at Iberia and fuel costs have hit results at International Airlines Group (IAG), which owns both the Spanish flag-carrier and British Airways.

It reported a net loss for 2012 of 943m euros ($1.24bn; £816m), compared with a 562m euros profit in 2011.

IAG's fuel bill rose 20.4% to 6.1bn euros, while Iberia announced recently that it was cutting 3,800 jobs.

The airline has been hit by Spain's weak economy.

Chief executive Willie Walsh said the results showed Iberia "must adapt to survive" but there has still been no agreement with Spanish unions.

IAG was formed in 2011 by the merger of Iberia and BA.

Ithaca Energy Inc (IAE.L) (IAE.TO) said it would acquire Valiant Petroleum Plc (VPP.L) for 203 million pounds in cash and stock, in a deal that would allow the North Sea-focused company to double its production forecast for the year.

The offer represents a premium of 37 percent to Valiant's Thursday close on the London Stock Exchange. Valiant shares rose 35 percent to 469.25 pence on Friday morning. Top 10 Retirement Tips

The acquisition of Valiant Petroleum, which has assets in the United Kingdom and Norway, will more than double Ithaca's 2013 production forecast to 14,000 to 16,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day.

Valiant Petroleum put itself on the block in September.

Ithaca, which itself received a number of offers, said in May it had ended talks with all parties, citing softening Brent crude prices.

Ithaca's shares were down 4 percent at 122.7 pence in early trading on the London Stock Exchange.

Gold Edges Up as Dollar Eases From Six-Month Peak

Gold inched up on Monday, bouncing off a one-week low marked the session before as the dollar eased from a more than six-month high hit in the previous session on the back of upbeat U.S. data. The $85 billion automatic spending cuts in U.S. government programs, known as the "sequester", kicked off on Friday in the absence of a deal among lawmakers. Investors will be watching for its impact on the economy.

Spot gold had risen 0.3 percent to $1,580.19 an ounce by 0043 GMT, after hitting a one-week low of $1,564.44 in the previous session.

U.S. gold was up nearly half a percent at $1,579.90.

President Barack Obama formally ordered broad cuts in U.S. government spending on Friday night after he and congressional Republicans failed to reach a deal to avert automatic reductions that could dampen economic growth and curb military readiness.

But vigorous manufacturing data, together with strong auto sales and a rise in consumer sentiment in February, suggested a pickup in economic growth, offsetting concerns about the impact of the spending cuts.

Hedge funds and money managers increased their net long gold futures and options positions in the week to February 26 from a more than four-year low hit a week earlier, Commodity Futures Trading Commission data showed on Friday.

The All New FE Gold & Diamond News

Jeweller wants greater diamond supply to local cutters, polishers

More diamonds should be made available to the local cutting and polishing industry so that it adds greater value to the South African economy, says diamond and tanzanite jewellery designer and manufacturer Shimansky CEO Yair Shimansky.

He notes that “there is still a lot of diamond mining and trading taking place”, but that most of the diamonds are not processed locally.

“Five years ago, about 20 000 people were employed in the polishing and cutting sector of the diamond industry in South Africa. Currently, this figure is only about 2 000,” Shimansky points out.

He says South Africa still produces high-quality diamonds and, as the demand for diamonds in countries such as India and Asia is increasing, “there is definitely a gap between supply and demand”. This will lead to diamonds increasing in value, providing South Africa with a significant opportunity to grow its diamond industry.

“We have confidence in the industry and will continue to invest in diamonds,” Shimansky adds.

Further, he says that, as the value of diamonds continues to increase, many investment banks are looking to diamonds as a way of capturing value.

The All New FE Gold & Diamond News

Jeweller wants greater diamond supply to local cutters, polishers

“We are dealing with several banks in Asia and Switzerland, advising them on which diamonds to buy as investments,” Shimansky says.

For South Africans, investing in diamonds has the added benefit of maintaining the exchange rate between the rand and the dollar as diamonds will retain their dollar value.

“Further, a diamond is also a mobile asset, unlike property . . . and it is safer than shares, which can easily lose their value,” Shimansky explains.

However, it is up to government to create a comfortable environment for investors to invest in the South African mining industry, he says, adding that investors are, in essence, searching for stability from government and also in terms of the labour force.

While it is not up to the Cape Town Diamond Museum, which was established by Shimansky in 2011, to create investment, it does showcase the significant role of South Africa in the global diamond industry, Shimansky says, adding that, “by visiting the museum, it will become clear to investors that there is still a lot of potential in investing in South Africa’s diamond industry”.

Why You Shouldn't Sell Oil?

When oil prices recently fell to below $80.00, I said don't sell.

The U.S. Energy Department increased its projections for crude oil prices for this year, adding that global oil consumption will rise to a record high in 2013. (Source: "U.S. Energy Department Raises 2013 Oil Forecast," Bloomberg, January 8, 2012.) Take a look at the price chart for the December West Texas Intermediate (WTI) futures contract. After trading at $115.00 in May 2011, we have seen oil prices slide, despite multiple attempts at rallying back to the $100.00 level. The spot WTI is trying to hold at its 50-day moving average (MA), currently above its 200-day MA of $85.08.

Yet the chart is displaying what looks like a bullish flag formation setting up, which means that higher oil prices could be coming, rising above $100.00 in the best-case scenario, based on my technical analysis. You need to be watchful of the $80.00 support level, which was breached on several occasions, but in each case, there was a rally after.

FEM believes oil will continue to hold above at least $80.00 a barrel going forward and will rally as the global economy strengthens. If you extend the oil futures contract to 2021, the current prices range from $83.00 to $96.00, so I'm not that worried and don't have the urge to go and sell.

Helping to add support will be the continued erosion in the major economies in the euro zone, along with its impact on the U.S. and

Why You Shouldn't Sell Oil?

Also add in the geopolitical issues in the Middle East. Iran and North Korea are real threats that could easily drive up oil prices.

FEM also expects oil prices to be supported by the oil cartel Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). OPEC estimates oil prices in nominal terms could hold in a range of $85.00–$95.00 a barrel for the rest of this decade, according to its internally produced World Oil Outlook report.

The report blames the spikes in oil prices as driven by speculators, which I fully agree with, but it is part of the business. An interesting note in the report is the assumption that oil will reach $133.00 per barrel by 2035.

It's interesting to understand how those behind the oil cartel think. The report says the current level in oil prices is due to the state of the global economy, "marked by below average trend growth, in combination with high unemployment rate in developed economies and continuing global growth imbalances." And while oil prices are estimated to trade below $100.00 a barrel for the next eight years, you know that there will be volatility that could drive prices to well above $100.00.

In FEM's view, looking at accumulating—NOT selling—oil stocks on weakness.

Scams Review for July and August 2012

Welcome to another 2 month dedicated to Evil Fraudsters and Scammers and how far these people would go to get their hands on your money.

We at First Edge have seen & knows all what there is to know about scammers.

We will can also supply you with the right procedures and put you in contact with the right sellers that can make you money.

90% of the time it come down to greed in losing your investment this means not looking at the down-side of the transaction and not speaking with professional companies like First Edge for advice.

First Edge can safely say it has never lost out on any Gold Deal that why we are getting more and more investors to transact deals for them.

Our procedures are water tight and we are always updating our procedures for our ourselves & our wide range of financiers.

The scams can range from a business claiming to be a gold bar, gold dust or gold coin supplier to an individual involved in the shipping, investment or sale of gold. Gold scams are common in West Africa but no country is immune. Scams can take place in any country.

In addition to the common gold scams on the internet, gold bars carry an increased risk of forgery due to their less stringent parameters for appearance. Larger bars have a greater volume that can enable a partial forgery using a tungsten-filled cavity, which is not easy to detect. Fake gold coins are common, and are usually made of gold-plated lead. The purity of a gold bar or coin can be expressed as a decimal figure ranging from 0 to 1, known as the millesimal fineness. Such rat-ings and quality in-spections can be easily manipulated.

Good Day Sir,

I have just come across your website and I wish I had known about it 3 weeks ago. The snake that that man is, is unbelievable.

He has cost me just over $12 000 in flights, accommodation, food and sorts.

He said that we needed to take Industrial diamonds to Zanzibar for him and that he will pay immediately. we were then told the transfer had been done, yet we are still waiting for that.

Something needs to be done to stop this man. Kaylan Grover Cell : 073 486 4621 Skype : kaylan.grover
