WORLD DIAMOND COUNCIL EXPRESSES REGRET AT DECISION BY GLOBAL WITNESS TO LEAVE KIMBERLEY PROCESS

NEW YORK- The World Diamond Council expresses its regret at the announcement by Global Witness that it is leaving the Kimberley Process, and calls upon the organization's leadership to reconsider its position.

The World Diamond Council has always felt that progress in the campaign to end the trade in conflict diamonds will come through dialogue and engagement, and in this respect feels that the decision by Global Witness to walk away from the table will be counterproductive.

Global Witness' withdrawal from the Kimberley Process is regrettable, particularly given the important progress that has been made in addressing the concerns they raise.

- In spite of the organization's absence at November's Kimberley Process Plenary Meeting in Kinshasa, an agreement was reached by all governments, including Canada, the European Union, the United States and Australia, to continue to hold the Zimbabwe government to account and to allow only exports from those operations in Marange that have demonstrated compliance.

- With regard to the Ivory Coast, which has been suspended from the KP for several years, the Kimberley Process, with the active participation of the diamond industry, has been working closely and effectively with UN agencies to identify diamonds from that country and establish remote monitoring of its diamond mining activity. And even now, with peace being restored to the Ivory Coast, the KP continues to work with these parties to ensure that procedures are in place and compliance is achieved, before it is allowed back into the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme.

- Venezuela, which also is suspended from the Kimberley Process, has been given until December 20 to provide the documents and data required, or it will be "removed from the list of KP participants."

While the rate of progress is sometimes slower than desired, the Kimberley Process has proven over the years that it is effective and does have teeth. Legal exports from the Marange region of Zimbabwe were effectively held up for two years, before it was decided that the situation at certain mines has improved to the point that monitored exports could proceed. Indeed, while boycotts against Zimbabwe have almost all proven ineffective, the KP was the only organization able to report actual progress in getting the government to change its approach.

"The overriding goal of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme has been to protect the integrity of the diamond, so that it properly contributes to bettering the lives of ordinary people living in the areas in which it is mined and processed. The system is not perfect, and is in need of constant review. However, you cannot contribute to the process if you are no longer engaged," said Eli Izhakoff, WDC President.

DIAMOND FACTS

MORE THAN 99% OF DIAMONDS ARE NOW FROM CONFLICT FREE SOURCES AND TRADED UNDER THE UN-MANDATED KIMBERLEY PROCESS.

First Edge Ltd is dedicated to presenting the facts about conflict diamonds, along with how diamonds are driving economic growth and prosperity in countries around the world.

In 2004, the Canadian Government, as chair of the Kimberley Process, cited that 99.8% of the world's rough diamonds are certified to be from sources not involved in funding conflict.

Most people are unaware of the role diamonds play in bringing real benefits to people in the countries around the world where diamonds are sourced. Nowhere is this more evident than in Africa.

It is also in Africa that this same resource has been used to fund conflict. In 2000, a coalition of governments, non-governmental organizations and the diamond industry worked together to address this issue.

In 2002, they established the Kimberley Process Certification System, a UN-backed process that has virtually eliminated the trade in conflict diamonds. Today, over 99% of the world's supply of diamonds is from sources free of conflict.

By Steven Jameson for First Edge
Top 10 Biggest Gold Mines in the World

Here is a list of the 10 biggest gold mines in the world, based on available 2010 production data.

There are differences of opinion about which one should be ranked No. 1. Some consultants say the world's largest gold mine, by production, is the Muruntau gold mine in Uzbekistan; other consultants say the world's largest gold mine is the Grasberg gold mine in Indonesia.

The majority opinion appears to be Grasberg.

There are also differences of opinion about how much some of the mines below actually produce. Occasionally there is difficulty in obtaining yearly production figures. A more common challenge arises because mining production data are not standardized, and not all of the data are calculated using the same calendar.

Further, some figures aggregate production figures from discrete operations within a complex, while other figures break out production data for each discrete operation within a complex. For example, Gold Fields Ltd. operates the Kloof and Driefontein mines in Guaten Province, which is west of Johannesburg, South Africa, as a single complex that it refers to as KDC. Some rankings of gold mines report annual production from KDC as a single number, while others report annual production from Kloof and Driefontein separately.

Among the most valuable sources for gold mining production data, besides reports from mining companies themselves, are the Raw Materials Group in Solna, Sweden; Canada's Metals Economics Group in Halifax, Nova Scotia; an Intierra Resource Intelligence, based in Perth, Australia.

By Steven Jameson for First Edge Top 10 Biggest Gold Mines in the World

The following list draws from each of these sources, as well as others, and thus is not a simple duplication of any one group's rankings.

1. Grasberg Gold Mine

This mine, which is in the Indonesian province of Papua, produced 2,025,000 ounces of gold, according to the annual report of Rio Tinto Plc. The mine is majority owned by Freeport-McMoRan Copper & Gold Inc. Besides gold, it also produces silver / copper.

2. Muruntau Gold Mine:

This mine, which is about 250 miles west of the capital in Uzbekistan, is believed to have produced approximately 1,800,000 ounces of gold last year. The project, which is an open-pit operation, is run by state-owned Navoi Mining and Metallurgical Combinat.

3. Carlin-Nevada Complex

This mine, which is in the U.S. state of Nevada, produced 1.735 million ounces in 2010. It is owned by Newmont Mining Corp. It includes both open-pit and underground operations.

4. Yanacocha Gold Mine

Gold Hits 5-week High as Euro, Commodities Rise

Gold may set a record high above $2,000 an ounce in late 2012 or early 2013, but the metal is nearing the end of a decade-long run that has lifted prices by more than 600 percent, metals consultancy GFMS said on Tuesday as it released a closely watched industry report.

"The report does acknowledge that the gold market is nearing the closing stages of its decade-long bull run and that, once the macroeconomic backdrop changes and investment in gold fades - probably some time next year - a secular retreat in the price will unfurl," GFMS said.

India, the world's biggest consumer of bullion, has changed the import duty on gold to two percent of value from the earlier flat 300 rupees per 10 grams and that of silver to six percent of value from 1,500 rupees per kilogram

Gold climbed to its highest in five weeks on Tuesday as German data boosted the euro after several sessions of losses, and as stocks and commodities were lifted by Chinese trade data, which was seen likely to prompt pro-growth measures by Beijing.

The precious metal later eased back below $1,660 an ounce as the euro came under pressure from news the European Commission will take legal steps against Hungary over laws governing its central bank and others, but remained firmly supported.

Spot gold was up 0.8 percent at $1,656.90 an ounce at 1451 GMT, having earlier peaked at $1,667.41, while U.S. gold futures were up $26.60 an ounce at $1,657.40. Prices are up 5.9 percent this year after falling 10 percent in December.

"The issues that have been supportive of gold -- the debt crisis, quantitative easing, lack of economic growth in Europe -- should all still be there," said Citigroup analyst David Wilson. "When we got down to $1,520, $1,530 (in December), you had to think, this is a good point to buy in."

"There are good reasons to see support for gold. There seems to be more confidence in gold at the moment," he added.

While gold's rise since the start of the year has occurred without the benefit of a weaker dollar, it extended gains on Tuesday as the euro rose versus the U.S. unit.

Gold Hits 5-week High as Euro, Commodities Rise

The euro hit the day's high versus the dollar after a strong reading of German business sentiment suggested the euro zone's largest economy was improving despite the bloc's debt crisis.

It is still down on the year, however, and the outlook for the single currency remained negative after Standard & Poor's downgraded the euro zone's EFSF bailout fund by one notch to AA+ following multiple euro zone downgrades on Friday.

Elsewhere, stocks and commodities rose after data showed China's economic growth in the latest quarter beat expectations but was still its weakest in 2-1/2 years, potentially heralding fresh pro-growth measures from the government.

"The property slowdown has gathered speed and property investment growth slowed sharply to only 12 percent year-on-year in December," said Societe Generale analyst Yao Wei.

"New property starts slowed all the way to only 0.9 percent year-on-year. It indicates that in Q1 2012 the numbers will be very unpleasant. Policy easing will continue.

GOLD SET TO PEAK

Gold may set a record high above $2,000 an ounce in late 2012 or early 2013, but the metal is nearing the end of a decade-long run that has lifted prices by more than 600 percent, metals consultancy GFMS said on Tuesday as it released a closely watched industry report.

How to Make Double the Gains as Gold Hits $2,200

Investors can look forward to an excellent year for one very special investment: Gold.

Gold prices are set to break $2,200 in the next few months.

That's more than 25% in gains for those who buy in right now, which is nothing to scoff at - unless you know what Money Morning editor Peter Krauth knows.

If you do, those 25% gains look like child's play compared to the 100% you could earn exploiting a small group of "rubber band" gold stocks that could start rebounding as early as this month.

In fact, according to Peter's new Money Morning report, these gold stocks are stretched to the limit right now, and the slightest trigger could send them soaring.

Why? Because there's an important ratio in the gold markets that's been stretched out of shape by the boom.

This ratio - between a certain group of gold investments and the spot price of gold - has been maintained for decades.

Traditionally, these investments, which can be as cheap as $15 per share, average a 2:1 ratio with gold - meaning if gold goes up 10%, these stocks double that, going up 20%. If gold goes up more than 60% - like it did from mid-2010 to mid-2011, these stocks should go up 120%.

But the recent run up in gold prices has gone too high, too fast for these investments to keep up. And that 2:1 ratio has been thrown completely out of whack, with these stocks trading nearly sideways, despite much higher returns as gold prices surged.

That's about to change...

After more than 18 months of surging gold prices, these "rubber band" stocks have been stretched as far as strength will allow. And as they snap back, they could easily break 100% gains or higher - just to come up even with the current price of gold.

NEW YORK - The World Diamond Council expresses its regret at the announcement by Global Witness that it is leaving the Kimberley Process, and calls upon the organization's leadership to reconsider its position.

The price of gold hovered around $1,600 per ounce at the end of 2011, rising over 15% in 2011, following uncertainty in the equity markets and the global economy as a whole.

The biggest individual holders of gold—central banks, international organizations and governments—are believed to account for approximately 16.5 percent of the world's gold, holding about 30,700 tons.

The wife and I were sitting around the breakfast table on a lazy Sunday morning.

I said to her, If I were to die suddenly, I want you to immediately sell all my shares or put it in our grand children's name.

Now why would you want me to do something like that? she asked.

I figure that you would eventually remarry and I don't want some asshole having my shares.
