Getting rich is largely about luck shame the wealthy don't want to hear it

A new report confirms how the rich become deluded about their talents, but also hints at a growing acknowledgement of inequality.

The UK suffers from the highest levels of income inequality in Europe – partly because of the delusions of its rich. In countries where the rich have less, they tend to be less delusional, about themselves, about other people, about what is possible, and about why some become rich.

In the UK, it is unsurprising to read that an investment banker thinks £100m is a lot of money but “not a ridiculous amount of money”. In a report in The Guardian this week, we also heard that one particular banker is “fairly confident” that a driven and passionate individual could “start from zero and get to £100m within 20 years”.

ADVERTISING

However, there is hope. In the research report that kicked off this latest set of news stories, Katharina Hecht from the London School of Economics and Political Science found that one third of her sample of extremely rich people working in the City of London agreed that “the government should reduce income differences”. The sample is extremely small and this subset of the very rich has not been asked similar questions before, but what they say chimes with reports from the US last year, which implied attitudes among the extremely wealthy are beginning to change.

In 2016 in New York, 50 millionaires wrote to the state's governor, Andrew Cuomo, asking him to increase their taxes because they thought economic inequalities had grown too high. The group included Abigail Disney, granddaughter of Walt Disney, and Steven Rockefeller, a fourth-generation member of that very wealthy family. The offspring of the rich at least know they did not bring in their riches, let alone create them out of thin air.

In truth, no one creates wealth out of the ether as the mythic phrase “wealth creator” suggests. Most wealth is appropriated from others, not made. Wealth can grow but only when it is well shared, not corralled into the hands of a few. Wealth growth rates are highest in countries that are more equitable than their neighbours. Four years after the great financial crash, Michael Lewis, one of the most successful people ever to write about the financial industry tried to explain to a group of Princeton University graduates why most of his own and his audience's success would be down to luck. The author of The Big Short and Moneyball told them that the odds would just be tipped a little in their favour if they were born with a silver spoon in their mouth:

Getting rich is largely about luck shame the wealthy don't want to hear it

People really don't like to hear success explained away as luck – especially successful people. As they age, and succeed, people feel their success was somehow inevitable. They don't want to acknowledge the role played by accident in their lives. There is a reason for this: the world does not want to acknowledge it either.

The world Lewis was talking about was not the whole world, but the world as seen by the elites in unequal countries. By “world” he really meant “America”, and in particular he was talking about the “American Dream” – the idea that anyone can make it if they try hard enough and are talented enough, no matter how economically unequal the society is they are competing in.

The American dream is a myth, just like the London investment banker's fantasy. Those who make money are often not very talented at all. They were just lucky at the right points in their lives. They might have worked hard and often are driven and greedy, but thousands of others will have worked as hard as them, been just as greedy as them, and not consistently struck it lucky. Most often, those who make money had money given to them in the first place, through inheritance that increased their chances; but it is always down to luck. Don't believe the myth of the nice, kind, gifted, self-made entrepreneur.

We live in a world in which those who have got to the top have got there not out of great merit, but because they often had a few unfair advantages to start with, such as being born male, white and rich, because they had many lucky breaks on the way up, and often because they were willing to stamp on others' chances as they rose. The human world does not consist of just a few superior beings able enough to do the key things that need doing, and a lumpen mass of inferior beings who could never do these things and so should be penalised appropriately.

Top 10 Red Flags for Private Placement Programs

1. Private Placement Programs with VERY High Returns: If you hear about a private placement investment yielding over 50% per week, it is UNLIKELY to fulfill its promises. Unless you have over 100M, and are extremely lucky, you are barking up the wrong tree. Please review our article on private placement yields for more information.

2. Programs which “Piggy back” or Pool Investors to Meet a Minimum: Pooling investors for private placement programs is risky, and unfortunately, it is quite frequent in today’s private placement world. The problem is, if you have a large number of investors in a private placement, there is a good chance that one will “cry wolf” because they feel uncomfortable due to the lack of transparency. Once that happens, which it usually does, the SEC, FBI, etc. will begin an investigation that could last years, freezing everyone’s assets.

3. “Ping” Programs, or “Administrative Holds”: Private placement “ping programs”, or programs that require administrative holds, are everywhere but rarely ever work. The problem is simple: there is no collateral on hand to stimulate the line of credit for the private placement trader. Many inexperienced private placement brokers push these deals, NEVER succeeding despite years of efforts.

4. Claims of “No Risk” for the Investor: In any alternative investment, there is always risk. This is especially true for private investments, due to their unregulated nature and high risk strategies. Despite what many brokers may say, private placement programs DO carry risk. To be successful in any private placement, you must always collateralize your funds, and assign them to the trader. If the trader defaults on the line of credit, the funds of the investor can be seized.

5. No One Vouches for their Success with the Trader: If you are investing in a private placement program, ALWAYS be sure to speak with someone who has been successful with the trader. Investors who choose to move forward with a private placement program which hasn’t been vouched for are taking a huge risk. To state the obvious, acting as a “guinea pig” is not the best decision when seeking private placement.

Top 10 Red Flags for Private Placement Programs

6. The “Program Manager” Slips Up: If you ask the same questions twice, and the program manager changes their answers even slightly, you should dig deeper to look for more inconsistencies. Think of your conversation with the representative and trader of the private placement program as a psychological analysis. Every response, tone, and answer should be assessed to ensure you are comfortable before moving forward.

7. Traders that Accept Leased Bank Instruments: If a private placement trader accepts a leased bank instrument, move on before you waste your time. No REAL private placement program will accept funds which you do not have full control over. Though leased bank instruments have become extremely popular, in all reality, you have a one in a million shot of being successful. For more information, visit our article on the FACTS of bank instrument leasing.

8. Private Placement Programs that Accept Hard Assets: If you have hard assets, and are looking to get into a private placement program, then please be safe. Unfortunately, there is a liquidity crisis worldwide, and it is very tough to get banks to loan against illiquid assets. In all honesty, your best bet is to sell the asset, and invest a portion of the earnings into a private placement program.

9. “Bullet Programs”, or Short-term “Leveraged” Programs: Short term or “bullet programs” typically promise extremely high yields, and very rarely work. Most real private placements last 40 weeks, due to the contractual agreements between the trader and their exit buyers who purchase the medium term notes (MTN)/bank guarantees (BG). Usually, short term programs claim to “leverage” the funds, and by doing so, “create immensely higher returns”.

10. The Old Fashioned Bait and Switch Technique: If a private placement program seems too good to be true, look out for the infamous “bait and switch” technique. In many cases, private placement brokers will paint a rosy picture of the process, and then switch the terms once the investors is so excited that they are ready to do whatever they need to get the “high returns”. This is very common, so investors must ALWAYS be aware of this unfortunate scenario when verifying the details of any program with the trader.

Though there are plenty of actions which can be considered “red flags” in private placement, we have listed the most common scenarios above. If you remember nothing else from this article, a good rule of thumb is: if it sounds too complicated, or too good to be true, it usually is.

As with any other material we publish, reading can teach you a lot, but applying the knowledge and tips we provide is far more important. We didn’t write this article for fun, look for any sign of inconsistency, and act if needed before it’s too late. Remember, common sense is your friend, and when you choose to follow hope over rational thought, the oasis will always disappear when you arrive.

Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships 2017

The buzzing atmosphere at one of the biggest viewed tennis sporting events of the year in Wimbledon, one of four annual Grand Slam tennis tournaments held around the world.

Dress down Wimbledon: SW19 eases code in Centre Court debenture seats to allow open neck shirts despite strictly enforcing all-white kit rules on players

- Debenture tickets cover the most expensive Wimbledon seats for five years
- The next batch, for 2016-2021, have already been sold - at £50,000 a ticket
- Traditionally, debenture ticket holders wore a smart jacket and tie, or dress
- This year the dress code has been relaxed and only 'dirty trainers' are out
- No tie needed, t-shirts OK, and jeans are fine as long as they're not ripped
- One ticket holder said: 'Getting dressed up for the tennis is part of the fun'
- Decision comes as rules governing what players wear are tightened up
- Colours - even coloured pants - are out in bid to stop overt sponsors' logos

About

Experience two weeks of first-class tennis, strawberries and cream, and good-natured queuing, at the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships.

The world of tennis descends on Wimbledon in South West London every summer for the longest-running tennis tournament in the world, and one of four annual Grand Slam tennis events held around the globe. Games are still played on the original playing surface, grass, and there's a strict white-only dress code for players.

Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships 2017

The tournament attracts around 500,000 spectators and millions of television viewers worldwide.

Wimbledon Tickets: In Advance

Book advance tickets for Wimbledon by entering the public ballot, which was first introduced in 1924. The ballot is always oversubscribed, so entry does not entitle you to tickets. Successful applicants are selected at random by computer. It is not possible to request tickets for specific days or courts.

Hundreds of Centre Court and No.3 Court tickets also go on sale online via Ticketmaster the day before each game.

Wimbledon Tickets: On the Day

Almost uniquely for a major sporting event, Wimbledon offers spectators the chance to buy premium tickets on the day – but be prepared to queue!

Grab one of a limited number of tickets available daily by joining the queue at the Gate 3 turnstiles. You are only entitled to purchase one ticket per person queuing and payment is cash only. Several thousand ground admission tickets are also available each day. These give you the chance to watch games from unreserved seating and standing areas on Courts 3 to 19. Once ground capacity has been reached, people standing in the queue are admitted on a one-out, one-in basis.

History of Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships

The Lawn Tennis Championships at Wimbledon have developed from the first meeting in 1877, witnessed by a few spectators, to a highly professional tournament attracting an attendance of close to 500,000 people. Players from more than 60 nations compete in front of a crowd of millions worldwide, through the press, radio, internet and television.

The New Scammers Tricks

More than three million people in the UK are the victims of scams every year. Many of them lose hundreds or even thousands of pounds, after being taken in by sophisticated scams and devious criminal gangs. This month is Scams Awareness Month, which aims to raise awareness of scams, and encourage people to be on their guard.

There are thousands of different scams doing the rounds, ranging from fake lotteries and prize draws to investment schemes, attempts to get hold of your financial details, and even tricks designed to get you to transfer your money into the criminal gang's bank account.

It's difficult to stay on top of each variation, so another option is to be aware of how these criminals tend to get into your home, so you can be on your guard.

Cold Internet Connections

This is still the most common way that criminals will get in contact through Skype, whatsapp, here are some of the very latest common scams run by scammers. This includes boiler room scams - which involve calling people and using high-pressure sales techniques to get you to invest in something essentially worthless. They take an average of £5,000 $7,000 from each victim, so they will put time and effort into convincing you that their scam is a legitimate investment.

Gold and Diamond

Lets start with the gold scammers, we have found that many scammers know that its impossible to use the old scam's by presenting pictures of gold and diamonds and ask the investor to help them with the cost of their taxes and carriage cost.

This might be the case 2 to 3 years ago but in most of the African countries there are real buyers on the ground that will cover all these cost, so their new tactic is to build up the investors confident by saying that their prepared to pay all the CIF cost, but the investor will need to cover the Hotel and refinery cost, in some ways this seems to be acceptable at the time, the good scammers will build up you confidence in discussions and even send you documents related to the CIF Shipment, until the 12 hour surprise which will come, where they will be asking for fund due to unforeseen circumstances.

Vishing

Another common phone scam is vishing - where they pretend to be from your bank, or the police, and warn you there has been fraud on your account. They then persuade you to transfer your money into a 'safe' account. If you do as they say, you are actually transferring your money into their account.

A variation on this theme is to tell you that there has been fraud on your account, so they are sending round a courier to pick your card up. They then take the card and go on a spending spree.

The best way to protect you from all of these is never to believe anything you are told on a cold call, and to hang up.

Review of the world's 8 biggest gold-mining countries

Gold is mined in around 90 countries worldwide. Some of the countries that historically have been top producers continue to be so, including Australia, USA and South Africa. But China is now the world's top producer, having increased productivity significantly since 2005.

Australia

Australia continues to be at the forefront of world gold production. From being the fourth largest producer of gold in 2008, Australia's production has surged to secure the country's position as the world's second largest producer of gold in both 2009 and 2010.

Western Australia is responsible for 75% of Australia's gold production and also hosts approximately two thirds of Australia's 4,500 tonnes of estimated gold resources. Western Australia's State Government received royalties from mining of some US$5.14 billion.

Australia has consistently been one of the world's largest producers of gold since its first gold rush, centred on Victoria in 1851. During the 1850's, Australia was producing some 40% of the world's gold. The immigration sparked by the rush, fuelled further agricultural and industrial development and saw nearly 500,000 people attracted to the state of Victoria.

As well as being the world's largest producer of gold, China represents one of the most significant markets for gold consumption. In 2011, China was second only to India in this regard with demand for 779.8 tonnes of gold, a 22% increase on the previous year. China is also a significant holder of gold reserves, currently behind only USA, Germany, the IMF, Italy and France.

60% of Chinese gold production comes from five provinces: Shandong, Henan, Jiangxi, Yunnan and Fujian. Although China has a large number of relatively small operating mines, consolidation has reduced the number of producing entities from 1,200 in 2002 to 700 at the end of 2010. The country's largest producer is Zijin Mining Company, whose Zijinshan Gold & Copper Mine is the single largest gold producer.

Commodities Break Their Ties

Tumbling oil prices and a historic rally in the U.S. dollar had commodity markets marching in lock step for months, but they broke ranks in the second quarter.

Oil prices, which touched six-year lows in March, gained 24.9% in the second quarter on expectations of slowing supplies and higher demand. Meanwhile, the dollar pulled back from 12-year highs as investors pushed back their forecasts for higher interest rates in the U.S.

"This has helped commodities become independent and dispersed once again," said Michael Haigh, global head of commodities research at Société Générale.

Investors often trade commodities as a basket where oil occupies a large segment, and its downdraft spurred many traders to sell the group. Since most raw materials are traded in dollars, the buck's meteoric rise also tarnished the sector's appeal to investors wielding weaker currencies. The fraying ties between commodities illustrate how the influence of the broader financial market can be fleeting. While the sector can be swept lower by external forces like the dollar, over the longer term these markets tend to shake off external factors.

Financial Instrument

In the recast version of Europe's flagship markets legislation — the Market in Financial Derivatives Directive (Mifid II) — there will be a marked narrowing of the existing exemptions for commodity traders as well as an extension of what constitutes a financial instrument.

The details are complex but broadly speaking, if a commodity trading house is a heavy user of financial derivatives relative to either the market or their business, they run the risk being regulated as a financial services company.

This is important because falling under Mifid II, which will come into force at the start of 2017, brings with it obligations. Arguably the most onerous is the fourth iteration of the Capital Requirements Directive, which would force commodity traders to hold as much capital as a bank. But there are others such as position limits and clearing thresholds.

The bill for compliance with these rules could run into hundreds of millions of dollars for the biggest commodity traders unless the industry is able to secure carve outs or preserve the existing exemptions.

Now, there is still a chance that could happen. And with a final consultation period still to be completed, the industry is growing more vocal.

A recent report commissioned by Trafigura, one of the world's biggest commodity traders, argued against the need to place strict capital requirements on trading houses because they were not a threat to the stability of the financial system.

If farmers can predict their revenue they can produce more with less capital. So we have to make sure this is not hindered by new regulation

Commodities traders' alarm over Europe's stricter regulations

Industry needs to step up efforts to inform policy makers.

If you thought US plans to cap speculative activity in commodities were broad, then take a glance at what's unfolding on the European Atlantic side.

Policy makers in Europe want to place position limits, or caps, on the number of contracts speculators may control, on around 1,900 commodity derivatives (and securities priced off commodities), according to calculations by the UK's Financial Conduct Authority.

To put that figure in perspective, the US Commodity Futures Trading Commission position limit plan extends to just 28 contracts.

Unsurprisingly, this proposal and others are causing growing alarm among big commodity traders in Europe, who face the prospect of more onerous regulation.

Under the current rules that govern financial derivatives in Europe, commodity traders are not subject to many provisions, including position limits and capital requirements. But that's set to change.

What is a conflict diamond?

Conflict diamonds, also known as blood diamonds, war diamonds, or converted diamonds, are defined by the United Nations as “diamonds that originate from areas controlled by forces or factions opposed to legitimate and internationally recognized governments, and are used to fund military action in opposition to those governments...” Essentially, these diamonds are mined and sold in war-torn areas, with the profits used to fund violent rebellions.

Where do conflict diamonds come from?

The vast majority of conflict diamonds come from countries in southern and western Africa. The first reports of conflict diamonds were published in 1998 by Global Witness, and revealed the role that diamonds played in funding the rebels of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) in their war against the government. Angola, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and Sierra Leone are the most widely mentioned countries of origin for conflict diamonds, although other African countries including Côte d'Ivoire, Zimbabwe, and Liberia have also been involved in the practice.

What's being done about it?

In 2003, the UN established the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme (KPCS) to prevent the proliferation and sale of conflict diamonds. The diamond industry is very serious about self-policing at all levels of the supply chain. All major rough diamond producers, exporters, and importers are now members of the KPCS, and any diamond dealer who is found to be non-compliant is often black-listed. Their reputation is severely damaged, and dealers and jewelers will be very hesitant to do business with them. Despite criticism, the Kimberley Process has been quite successful in increasing sales of legal diamonds and discouraging the trade of conflict diamonds.

How many conflict diamonds are out there?

Once a diamond is cut, it is very difficult to tell where it came from. However, the number of conflict diamonds in circulation has drastically decreased over the past twenty years. At the peak of the Sierra Leone conflict, it is estimated that conflict diamonds accounted for between 4% and 15% of the global diamond trade. Currently, the World Diamond Council claims that less than 1% of diamonds are conflict diamonds.

How can I make sure my diamond isn't a conflict diamond?

Some retailers, like Brilliant Earth, specialize in conflict-free diamonds. If a jeweler is compliant with the Kimberley Process, he or she should be able to show you a diamond's System of Warranties statement. You don't have to avoid all diamonds from Africa; in fact, many of these countries rely on the legal diamond trade to finance schools, infrastructure, and growth. When diamond shopping, ask the store owner about the process it uses to guarantee its diamonds are conflict-free. He or she

Diamonds, from Pits to Depths

Several international mining corporations have established regional headquarters in Botswana and are looking for diamonds, uranium, gold and oil. Many have come back with positive results. Galane Gold Ltd announced that it has kicked off its first ore exploration from Tau underground in the northern part of the country.

Galane Gold or GG is a Toronto-based investment firm, an unhedged gold producer and explorer acting in mining operation and exploration in the Republic of Botswana. It is a publicly traded company which is listed on both the TSX Venture Exchange and the Botswana Stock Exchange. Galane Gold has already had several extensive exhibitions in the management of mining and exploring programs.

"This gold exploration is an expected evolution in order to improve the company's performance," GG said. The firm contributes with senior professional employees, who are committed to respect the environment and the communities in which they work.

At the beginning, GG didn't have the intention to pursue the resource of gold in Tau through underground mining. It started the project in the fourth quarter of 2013 and has finished its forced portal entry at the bottom of the existing Tau pit and the installation of the entire infrastructure required for the exploration. The company has put a graphical presentation of the detailed mining plan on the reported resource to mine about 85,000 ounces of gold over the next three years.

Ravi Sood, the Chief executive officer of Galane Gold, stated, "This project is a major step in the evolution of the company both with regards to a change from open pit mining to underground mining and our plans to extend mine life through further exploration." He then added, "We have completed this project within six months and from our own operating cash-flows is a testament to the experienced management team that we have put in place."

Botswana is ranked as the best investment jurisdiction in Africa, according to World Bank Global Investment Benchmarking Report. According to the Fraser Institute Global survey of Mining Companies best African mining jurisdiction and the seventh best mining country globally. It also has a strong economic environment. In fact, Botswana is regarded as the best mining country in Africa. It has political stability and strong GDP growth. Its status as an English speaking country is why Multinational firms such as Galane Gold can operate on its ground. The Australian firm, Gallery Gold, however, has also its entire exploration of Gold in the country. The company's most prospect exploration was the Mupane Gold Mine which officially opened in February 2005, will produce approximately 100,000 ounces of gold per year. Apart from that, Botswana is an emerging mining powerhouse.
