Changes with First Edge Ltd and FE Magazine!

Everyone at First Edge and FE Magazine is excited to announce the major changes with both First Edge and FE Magazine,

Sadly our CEO/ Managing Director Mr. McGhie will be taking a back seat of the daily transactions due to other business commitments, but he will still direct and oversee most of the major decisions that's will need his rubber stamp of agreement,

After this months Issue, We at FE Magazine will now generate our Issues on a quarterly basis, this is for our reader to get a more indebt read on what going on in the commodity industry, as well as all the different groups were able to offer and deliver to all our clients globally.

FE Magazine would also like to thanks our readers in sending us their mails of bad traders and brokers in our Complaints and Suggestion Box.

Due to the new changes we have tried responding to most emails; to give a better understanding on how our production process works, along with most traders and brokers who's dedicated their lives in making this industry safe and clear for good regulated business, we also found most of our readers was having some difficulty in trying to read our whole edition ,so in 2019 we'll be cutting short all our editorial pages to a minimal amount of wording, with the replacement of many showcases of wonderful digital color photos for more visual presentation to broaden our advertising spaces,

We are still using our beautiful free matte-finish PDF Magazine's download from our Magazines website to generate a larger spectrum of commodity readers.

“UNICEF” and “Oxfam” along with “Save The Children”

Last year has been one of unprecedented dangers for children globally. we tell the stories of some of the millions of children whose lives have been affected by war, disease, hunger and violence. Review of Wimbledon in the 21st century

Wimbledon is considered the world's premier tennis tournament and the priority of the Club is to maintain its leadership. To that end a long-term plan was unveiled in 1993, intended to improve the quality of the event for spectators, players, officials and neighbours.[14] Stage one (1994–1997) of the plan was completed for the 1997 championships and involved building the new No. 1 Court in Aorangi Park, a broadcast centre, two extra grass courts and a tunnel under the hill linking Church Road and Somerset Road. Stage two (1997–2009) involved the removal of the old No. 1 Court complex to make way for the new Millennium Building, providing extensive facilities for players, press, officials and members, and the extension of the West Stand of the Centre Court with 728 extra seats. Stage three (2000–2011) has been completed with the construction of an entrance building, club staff housing, museum, bank and ticket office.

A new retractable roof was built in time for the 2009 championships, marking the first time that rain did not stop play for a lengthy time on Centre Court. The Club tested the new roof at an event called A Centre Court Celebration on Sunday, 17 May 2009, which featured exhibition matches involving Andre Agassi, Steffi Graf, Kim Clijsters and Tim Henman. The first Championship match to take place under the roof was the completion of the fourth round women's singles match between Dinara Safina and Amélie Mauresmo. The first match to be played in its entirety under the new roof took place between Andy Murray and Stanislas Wawrinka on 29 June 2009.

Murray was also involved in the match completed latest in the day at Wimbledon, which ended at 11:02 pm in a victory over Marcos Baghdatis at Centre Court in the third round of the 2012 Championships. The 2012 Men's Singles Final on 8 July 2012, between Roger Federer and Murray, was the first singles final to be partially played under the roof, which was activated during the third set.

Review of Wimbledon in the 21st century

A new 4000-seat No. 2 Court was built on the site of the old No. 13 Court in time for the 2009 Championships. A new 2000-seat No. 3 Court was built on the site of the old No. 2 and No. 3 Courts.

On 1 August 2011, the All England Club transferred all of its assets relating to The Championships to a separate though wholly owned subsidiary, The All England Lawn Tennis Club (Championships) Limited, also known as AELTC. Since that time, the Club's activities have been conducted separately from those of The Championships.

In April 2013, Wimbledon unveiled its 'Master Plan' a vision in which to improve the championships over the next 10–15 years. This was in large part due to other Grand Slam tournaments such as the French Open and Australian Open also announcing expansion and re-development plans. Aspects of the master plan included new player and media facilities, expansion of the No.1 court including a new retractable roof, new catering and hospitality areas, additional floor to the museum building, construction of an underground car park and a total reconfiguration of the site to include 2 more grass courts and 6 clay courts. Part of the plan also includes buying the land of the adjacent Wimbledon Park Golf club for £65 million so that the tournament qualifying matches can be played on site

On 19 October 2018, it was announced that a tie-break will be played if the score reaches 12–12 in the final set of any match; this will apply to all competitions including in qualifying, singles and doubles. In related statement, it was announced that starting at the 2019 Championships; Quad Wheelchair competitions would become a permanent event.

Match formats

Matches in the Gentlemen's Singles and Gentlemen's Doubles are best-of-five sets; all other events are best-of-three sets. Up to and including the 2018 tournament, a tiebreak game is played if the score reaches 6–all in any set except the fifth (in a five-set match) or the third (in a three-set match), in which case a two-game lead must be reached. Since 2019, a final set tiebreak game is played if the score in the final set reaches 12–all

All events are single-elimination tournaments, except for the Gentlemen's, Senior Gentlemen's and the Ladies' Invitation Doubles, which are round-robin tournaments.

Up to 1921, the winners of the previous year's competition (except in the Ladies' Doubles and Mixed Doubles) were automatically granted byes into the final round (then known as the challenge round). This led to many winners retaining their titles in successive years, as they were able to rest while their opponent competed from the start of the competition. Since 1922, the prior year's champions were required to play all the rounds, like other tournament competitors.

Schedule

Each year the tournament began on the last Monday in June, two weeks after the Queen's Club Championships, which is one of the men's major warm-up tournaments, together with the Gerry Weber Open, which is held in Halle, Germany, during the same week. Other grass-court tournaments before Wimbledon are Eastbourne, England, and Rosmalen in the Netherlands, both combining mixed events. The other women's warm-up tournament for Wimbledon is Birmingham, also in England. The only grass-court tournament scheduled after the Championships is the Hall of Fame Tennis Championships at Newport, Rhode Island, USA, which takes place the week after Wimbledon.

Wimbledon is scheduled for 14 days, beginning on a Monday and ending on a Sunday. Before 1982 it ended a day earlier, with the women's singles final on the Friday and the men's singles final on the Saturday.[30] The five main events span both weeks, but the junior and invitational events are held mainly during the second week. Traditionally, unlike the other three tennis Grand Slams, there is no play on the "Middle Sunday", which is considered a rest day. However, rain has forced play on the Middle Sunday four times, in 1991, 1997, 2004 and 2016. On the first of these four occasions, Wimbledon staged a "People's Sunday", with unreserved seating and readily available, inexpensive tickets, allowing those with more limited means to sit on the show courts.

The second Monday at Wimbledon is often called "Manic Monday", because it is the busiest day with the last-16 matches for both men's and women's singles, where fans have a pick of watching on a single day, any of the best 32 players left; which is also unique in a Grand Slam singles competition.[31]

Review of Wimbledon in the 21st century

Players and seeding

Both the men's and ladies' singles consist of 128 players.[33] Players and doubles pairs are admitted to the main events on the basis of their international rankings, with 104 direct entries into the men's and 108 into the ladies' competitions. Both tournaments have 8 wild card entrants, with the remainder in each made up of qualifiers. Since the 2001 tournament, 32 players have been given seedings in the Gentlemen's and Ladies' singles, 16 teams in the doubles events. The system of seeding was introduced during the 1924 Wimbledon Championships. This was a simplified version allowing countries to nominate four players who were placed in different quarters of the draw.

This system was replaced for the 1927 Wimbledon Championships and from then on players were seeded on merit. The first players to be seeded as no. 1 were René Lacoste and Helen Wills

The Committee seeds the top players and pairs on the basis of their rankings, but it can change the seedings based on a player's previous grass court performance. Since 2002 a seeding committee has not been required for the Gentlemen's Singles following an agreement with the ATP.

While the seeds are still the top 32 players according to rankings, the seeding order is determined using the formula: ATP Entry System Position points + 100% points earned for all grass court tournaments in the past 12 months + 75% points earned for the best grass court tournament in the 12 months before that.

A majority of the entrants are unseeded. Only two unseeded players have won the Gentlemen's Singles: Boris Becker in 1985 and Goran Ivanišević in 2001. In 1985 there were only 16 seeds and Becker was ranked 20th; Ivanišević was ranked 125th when he won as a Wild Card entrant, although he had previously been a finalist three times, and been ranked no. 2 in the world; his low ranking was due to having been hampered by a persistent shoulder injury for three years, which had only just cleared up. In 1996, the title was won by Richard Krajicek, who was originally unseeded (ranked 17th, and only 16 players were seeded) but was promoted to a seeded position (still with the number 17) when Thomas Muster withdrew before the tournament.

No unseeded player has captured the Ladies' Singles title; the lowest seeded female champion was Venus Williams, who won in 2007 as the 23rd seed; Williams was returning from an injury that had prevented her playing in previous tournaments, giving her a lower ranking than she would normally have had. Unseeded pairs have won the doubles titles on numerous occasions; the 2005 Gentlemen's Doubles champions were not only unseeded, but also (for the first time ever) qualifiers.

Identifying Strategic Acquisitions and Structuring Successful M&A Deals

Independently Accredited and Certified by CPD - An Internationally Recognized Certification Board

Dear Readers,

Based on research by Harvard Business School, 70% to 90% of mergers and acquisitions fall short of meeting their financial expectations. To give you a critical step forward in pulling off successful M&A deals, I would like to invite you to Clariden's Identifying Strategic Acquisitions and Structuring Successful M&A Deals executive programs that will help you formulate the right M&A strategies and accomplish successful M&A transactions. Held successfully in major cities including Sydney, London, Toronto, San Francisco, Frankfurt and Hong Kong, over 300 financial leaders have participated in this program.

What You Can Expect From This M&A Program

Led by Thomas Kessler who has been successful in leading over US$20 billion of M&A transactions globally, this 2-day program will show you how to develop a successful end-to-end acquisition strategy for your company – from identifying the right acquisition target and transaction synergies to structuring the deal and implementing a successful post-merger integration strategy. You will learn how to shortlist a potential list of acquisition targets which complement your existing business and conduct effective valuation and due diligence techniques to arrive at the right value you should pay for your acquisition. At the end of the program, you will walk away with a clear roadmap on how to successfully identify and plan for your next acquisition.

Key Benefits & Takeaways

- Acquisition vs. Alliances – Understand when you should acquire and when you should partner
- Acquisition Target Identification, Profiling and Engagement – Understand how to select the right target and plan your acquisition strategy right from the beginning
- Develop M&A Capabilities – Build a successful M&A team for your organization. Create the right capability and deal structuring knowledge across your organization
- Synergies – Analyze and value deal synergies and risks
- Transaction Structuring – Arm your deal knowledge by understanding how to structure a transaction in the most effective manner from tax, legal and liability standpoint
- Due Diligence – Understand the key due diligence required when conducting an M&A process
- Valuation – Learn how to allocate the right acquisition price on your target and the premium you need to pay in a transaction to make the acquisition work
- Tax and Legal Considerations – Understand the tax vs legal considerations in an M&A process
- Post Merger Tax and Legal Considerations – Understand the tax vs legal considerations in an M&A process Post Merger Integration – Understand how to design and implement a successful post merger integration strategy to achieve your required synergies

Information for CPOs and CTAs—Avoiding financial ratio errors on NFA Forms PQR and PR

NFA Compliance Rule 2-46 and the related Interpretive Notice to NFA Compliance Rule 2-46 require commodity pool operators (CPO) and commodity trading advisors (CTA) to report quarterly two financial ratios regarding a CPO's or CTA's financial condition. As described in the Interpretive Notice, NFA Forms PQR and PR contain data fields for the Current Asset/Current Liability (CA/CL) ratio and Total Revenue/Total Expenses (TR/TE) ratio. A number of CPOs and CTAs are incorrectly reporting these financial ratios.

Ratios must be calculated using the accrual method of accounting

CPOs and CTAs have incorrectly calculated these ratios using a cash basis of accounting. Both ratios must be computed using the accrual method of accounting and in accordance with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles or another internationally recognized accounting standard, consistently applied.

The accrual method of accounting requires that revenues and expenses be recorded in the period in which they are earned or incurred rather than when they are received or paid. For example, a management fee earned in June and received in July should be recorded as revenue for June. Similarly, a bill for services received in June and paid in July should be recorded as an expense for June.

CA balance must only include assets owned by the CPO or CTA

CPOs and CTAs have incorrectly calculated the CA balance in the CA/CL ratio by including client assets invested in pools or managed accounts. However, the CA balance must be calculated using only the CPO's or CTA's own assets. These assets may include the CPO's or CTA's interest in a pool or managed account.

CA balance must only include the CPO's or CTA's current assets

CPOs and CTAs have incorrectly calculated the CA balance using total assets or non-current assets such as a receivable that is not due within the next twelve months or a long-term rent-related security deposit. The CA balance must include only current assets. A current asset is an asset that is expected to be converted to cash within the next year (e.g., cash, accounts receivable due within the next twelve months, marketable securities).

TR/TE Ratio must be calculated based on the prior twelve months

Although NFA Forms PQR and PR are filed quarterly, the TR/TE ratio should be calculated using revenue earned and expenses incurred during the prior twelve months. For example, a PQR or PR with an as of date of March 30, 2019 should include all revenue earned and expenses incurred from April 1, 2018 through March 30, 2019.

Additional guidance on calculating the ratios is available in the Interpretive Notice to NFA Compliance Rule 2-46 and the materials and recordings for NFA's May 2017 Member Workshop.

As a reminder, CPO and CTA Members must maintain all quarterly ratio calculations and any supporting documentation and make them available to NFA during an examination or upon request

"Time" has been one of the most talked about topics since the ancient Egyptians established the 24-hour day a long time ago. Limited time continues to be a popular and increasingly diverse topic that we all have to live by in today ever growing diverse global financial market place.

It's also a true fact that most independent companies or principle investors have no real start time to start their precious wasted day in speaking or reviewing the head company who's dealing with their company wealth management account. To make matters worse, most Proposals or DOA they've been presented to be engaged in, the broker/institution will sooner or later be required to slow down his schedule with little or no regard for his principle funds that's been lodged for the transaction.

It's always been our desk's procedure in create a compelling compliant check on all the contracts that's been presented to us before it's released to any of our Clients.

We regularly across companies or individuals who think they know this business that approach us with what we refer as third party deals, can become a daunting task to close along with a recipe that's doomed for failure, so much time wasted and such little time to respond to their proposal's they would eventually have to sacrifice their nights, weekends, (in too many cases) even their health, in trying to close any competitive product out the door on time for their client.

Unfortunately there isn't enough time to describe all the ways a company can better manage each proposal, First Edge time management team has its own in house time schedule globally, In the interest of all its clients

One of the cornerstones of our managing time is efficiency and time. Most teams rush to kick off each proposal before they are fully reviewed. However, most banking experts agree that up to 15 percent of the total scheduled proposals should be allocated to a compliance planning team.

ARE YOU AWARE OF SMOOTH TALK-

ARE YOU AWARE OF SMOOTH TALKING BAD BROKERS, ALONG WITH ASSOCIATED BAD COMPANIES

According to an old adage, if someone tells you "it's not about the money but the principle," chances are, it is about the money.

We at FE Magazine and First Edge Ltd have always tried to be one of the champions in the reduction of bad people and companies in today's financial and commodity Industry. In this edition our new study shows why these bad companies and people are quick to change their moral values depending on which of their rule's means more for them instead of others.

Hers the good news, our research has also found a major part of our UK Universities has enrolled a large amount of financial Agents and consultants who's looking to enrol in refresher courses.

We've also found a major reduction of inexperienced/unqualified people who attach themselves to the financial industry for all the wrong reasons, this is mainly due to today's ever growing technology, the small amount of bad broker who still believes in overnight success, is still prepared to present doctored viral financial instruments to unsuspecting clients, by persuading them that they have full control of major parties who released the financial documented information.

Required Financial Expectations

Most experienced reputable Investors and Institutions, already knows about the few bad third parties brokers, that carries no morals or values which are still around,.

"They also know these people also quick to adjust their moral values depending on which position benefits them the most financially. We also know that most good clients and financial institutions who can only operate under an umbrella of professional manner along with all the financial watchdogs legalities set around them, which are no more flexible and self-serving than they would like to admit, most of these restraints are set around the primary market and not the secondary, individual investors and companies who prefers to stay in the secondary market are prepared to open their books, once they've found a company who can show they have a good past record as a trusted company, along with an experienced team which has a firm past financial background knowledge who they can work with them in an honourable businesslike manner to represent them, also making sure their file is always kept private and confidential at all times also secure them with invasion of privacy .

ARE YOU AWARE OF SMOOTH TALKING BAD BROKERS, ALONG WITH ASSOCIATED BAD COMPANIES

According to an old adage, if someone tells you "it's not about the money but the principle," chances are, it is about the money.

Here's 6 simple ways of checks and revealing the who's who to deal with:

- 1. A Trader or Consultant/Broker should never reveal a current KYC to third party brokers unless they are able to reveal who's undertaking the file which could be a Holding /Trust/Platform, also make sure you have an attorney at hand, sometimes it's helpful to get a third party advice, which is a major tool that's used for institutional compliance checks mainly in the UK and USA.
- 2. Principles should always talk to principles or parties who has good standing in the financial industry, we all know real trusted consultants or brokers has always been the forefront for client since the beginning of time in the financial industry, they'll also know the excess able amount of funds they're able to present into trade in good faith for their client, these trusted consultants or brokers is always updated on a weekly or monthly basis, on what trade is available to pursue, alternatively, when an experienced principle decides to take on a new broker, he'll let him do the engaging and report back to him, after a short time the principle should be able to tell how good his new broker is, just by his performance level. if his new broker cannot present the new programs that's direct to the platform of institution to him, then he'll need to be dropped immediately
- 3. Never release Personal Banking Info unless they have the principles direct email address, also never send any swift unless you have full confirmation of the party you're releasing or sending to, also make sure all the institutions you dealing with, has been checked by your lawyer/attorney.
- 4. Due to Banking and Finance Houses Regulations and Restrictions set out mainly in the UK and parts of Europe we're 90% of instruments and programs are endorsed and delivered to most regulated platforms along with a host of holding/trust institutions, The UK - FCA finds a majority of these freshly cut instruments seems to get into these bad brokers and companies hands, which are mainly outside the UK, these bad brokers and companies are not ignored, the Banks works very closely with most of the Anti Crime Agencies such as NCA FBI Interpol, FE Magazine has also accumulated a large data base of bad people which is registered with all these Agencies, Companies like First Edge Ltd has also put in place all the required contracted documented restriction to protect all its clients, mainly because they don't know or wish to know who the third party brokers are, we all know when the process of the deal goes to a level of closing the brokers or consultants should automatically be instructed to build an FPA or NCNDA which will be signed off by the principle parties,

STAY AWAY

- 5. Stay away from upstart Wannabes Companies who has no track records or reference from major institutions or known foundations even banks, Most of these companies seems to bring other bad third party companies, who also presents themselves look like they're the main source to engage with. Most reputable brokers see this as a free get out card, 90% of the time these deals are dead end deals because of compliance checks, but getting one of them through could make these bad people hundreds of millions.
- 6. Our study also shows most bad participants who like to work in groups to transcribe in presenting deals, which they've heard about in the grape of brokers, you'll always get one person who presents themselves as a major player who had all the connections, after building up the confidence with any new client, he'd then bring in his other source or group who he'd already sold to the client, by claiming that his source or group is direct registered agent to more than one platform, the client will then be presented with some sort of program along with some sort of badly put together binding contractual agreement, which most knowledgeable main clients has seen more time than he'd like to, the client also know that he's not obligated to sign any of the documents to been presented to him, not until he's 100% sure he's talking direct to the Platform or institution if the brokers starts to waste time along with making things more difficult and more complicated, then you know you're being lied to or not dealing direct.

WHY FINISHING FIRST MATTER?

How good are you and the people around you in closing?

How good are you at making you're associates know you have the End Game when it come to Closing?

WHY FINISHING FIRST MATTER IN 2019-20

We won't discuss these low percentage of bad deals in the custody of people who'll always fail in the end, because it would take up most of this edition, so we'll get straight to the point on Why Finish First Matters as a Winner in 2019 and 2020, we all know there's many big political shifts happening around the world where curtain banks has become unstable due to their past history along with global political uncertainty with all these factor it's hard to define or predict any sure bets other than the financial market which has become a beast for traders especially in the UK banking sector.

So we'll start by looking at winners and leaders status that has that special core elements that help them know when to walk away or pass from bad deals or stay ahead on real deals as a successful entrepreneurial winners in today's ever growing financial market place where most companies would give their right hand to be associated with the right person or company to help them with the next stage of evolution for their own company.

Some winners approach to leadership is laser-focused on the journey rather than the destination, this journey is usually done by JV agreement or having a seated position in becoming a board of director within the needed company.

Most experienced leaders always look at all the valuable element that's been presented to them, in many ways they love to analyze and shaped whatever project has been put in front of them in a practical and philosophical way, they'll then present and discusses the entire pivotal role with their team, which some in the banking and trading financial world knows a team like this as backroom support, support teams like this should be able to present and authenticate all the necessary requirements needed to engage in. with a variety of blue print packages to proceed.

All across the banking and financial industry, education, e-commerce, along with most global non-profit associated sectors are urgently in the need for new top level effective leaders who has that special winning knowledge and capability to deal with all the pressing needs in today's fast moving financial market place around the world.

In most of our Financial and Commodity Institutional community, there's still a low percentage of well trained principle negotiators who some calls brokers/intermediaries.

Certain experience brokers or independent persons with registered company will always trying to find and prey on curtain unknown new agents/intermediaries/brokers, in which we all know as runners, at first these runners will always be prepared to give everything in most engagements.

Most educated runner/broker who's starting to be a real winner will quickly realize who's worth working with, this starts with their strong portfolio of trusted clients, by having a strong portfolio of clients, usually comes from having a kick start of experience from their past employment, in working and learning also being advised from their workplace and outside major institutional peers, being in constant contact with their peers will always helps in bringing all the qualities in future progression along with closing major deals.

WHY FINISHING FIRST MATTER IN 2019-20

It's also practical for most winners to give the benefit of the doubt on new introductions that comes with a file to engage with, mainly because of their little knowledge attract curtain companies As a first step up the ladder for most circumstances brokers/intermediaries are designed to carry out curtain menials tasks in putting together a portfolio in finding the right institution or companies that's needed to engage with for their client file, in most cases this should be handled with true legitimacy and honesty by show themselves as a bridge and nothing more.

Investors who rely in today's financial market place, see's many pitfalls, their biggest problem is always the updates and verification of documents, but there's only one problem they can't avoid, which is the time lost, as we all know wasted time is wasted money, which should never be the DNA of a winner, winners usually has more than one deal on the boil with other individuals or companies.

Core Elements of a Winner

The main parts of having these core elements mainly comes with past experience and knowledge that's picked up in the years of being in the business with a interdisciplinary career., here's some special parts a leader will pick up on his way to his success in being able to finishing first.

Client Security and Protection
Personal Authenticity, Transparency and Trust,
Personal Service above all
Full Presentation
Empathy, Courage, Collaboration
Innovation, Intellectual Curiosity
In-house Legacy of Associated Leaders

Las of all, Being a Winner that finishes first, can only survive with other Winners who'll always takes these elements and applies them to the greater good for their clients, by mentoring other instructive parties who they find they can trust without any miss-trust or reservations, mainly from past and current experience of closing deals.

The UK Government estimates £90bn of cash is laundered in Britain every year.

Lawyers are failing in their duty to combat suspected money laundering and have ignored repeated warnings to increase their reporting of suspicious activity by clients, Britain's top law enforcement body has said.

Donald Toon, the director of economic and cybercrime at the National Crime Agency (NCA), said the number of reports it had received from lawyers had fallen by 10% this year, despite of a host of recent scandals that have led to London being described as the money-laundering capital of the world.

Toon questioned whether lawyers were taking their obligations seriously enough, given that failure to report suspected money laundering and terrorist financing is a criminal offence punishable by up to five years in prison.

"We believe that we do not get the level of reporting from legal firms of suspicious activity that we would expect," Toon said. "We have said it a number of times and there has been no significant change." He said the NCA was working closely with the Solicitors Regulation Authority to identify legal professionals who were not following the rules. Toon is the latest public figure to raise concerns about UK solicitors and their proximity to controversial clients.

MPs censured the City firm Linklaters this year for its decision to advise on the stock market listing of an energy company belonging to the oligarch and Kremlin insider Oleg Deripaska, months before he was placed on the sanctions list by the US government.

Linklaters said its 70-member team in Moscow, which includes 12 partners, followed the highest standards and abided with all regulations against bribery and corruption, anti-money laundering and sanctions.

The scale of the problem NCA investigators are required to tackle is vast. The government estimates £90bn of cash is laundered in Britain every year.

This year the agency launched its first prosecutions under the new unexplained wealth order legislation, which targets non-EU nationals. The legislation should make it easier for the government to seize UK property and other assets suspected of being acquired using the proceeds of crime and corruption.

"What you are trying to do is create a change in the climate," Toon said. "Successive governments, for reasons that seemed right at the time, have wanted the UK to be an open, inviting market. That carries real opportunity and that carries some risk. The important thing is to get the balance right."

The government's historically light-touch approach to the flow of money into London has been a boon for its banks and for lawyers. However, at least one senior solicitor, a senior partner at the firm Child & Child, has been referred to the solicitors disciplinary tribunal for allegedly failing to carry out proper checks on a client. The hearing has yet to take place and the allegations are as yet unproven.

Solicitors and other professionals working in particular sectors have a legal duty to file what is known as a suspicious activity report (SAR) when they have grounds to suspect they are being asked to handle the proceeds of crime or transactions connected to terrorist finance. Those obliged to file include banks, auction houses, money transfer outlets, estate agents, bookmakers, accountants and tax advisers.

The fall in alerts from lawyers comes as the overall number of reports is rising. The total increased by 9.6% to 464,000 in the year to March 2018, according to the NCA. A full breakdown by profession will be released this year, but a look at previous periods shows lawyers trail those working in finance. The increase is being fuelled by banks, which flagged up almost 350,000 transactions in the year to March 2017, while law firms, including those specialising in property conveyancing, filed just 3,020 alerts.

The UK Government estimates £90bn of cash is laundered in Britain every year.

“There is a significant challenge engaging the thousands of law firms to promote the required level of understanding about the SARs regime, compared, for example, to the relatively small number of licensed banks in the UK.”

The release two years ago of the Panama Papers, a crackdown on holders of secretive Swiss accounts by the US tax office, and a series of swinging fines imposed on HSBC and Standard Chartered, among others, have led to yearly increases in the overall number of SARs.

These scandals exposed wrongdoing by banks, but they have also highlighted the role of accountants, company formation agents and law firms, like the now defunct Panama practice Mossack Fonseca, in enabling the injection of the proceeds of crime into the legitimate banking system. Despite this increased scrutiny, reports from lawyers have fallen by about 10% each year since 2015.

“It’s certainly not in the forefront of legal firms’ minds in the way it is if you hold a banking licence,” Toon said. He spoke of cases where banks had reported dubious property deals for which there had been no corresponding alert from solicitors involved in the same transaction.

Concerns about the failure to control money laundering led to the creation in January of a new regulator, the Office for Professional Body Anti Money Laundering Supervision.

The watchdog is charged with overseeing 22 organisations, from the Law Society to the Association of Tax Technicians.

The NCA is carrying out seven investigations into professional enablers, one of which relates to the legal profession. It has intelligence on a further 19 cases, 11 of which involve lawyers.

NCA said a number of cases had been referred to him by the SRA. “We have a number of cases we are now investigating criminally in relation to legal professionals. We are doing this on a coordinated basis working with the police to tackle the professional enablers.”

Addressing solicitors at a recent conference in Birmingham, Toon said they often had a better understanding of high-value transactions than any of the other professionals involved.

The NCA director warned lawyers that close involvement in their client’s affairs meant they faced a stark choice. “It’s about taking on the responsibility of serving the public or, if you don’t want to take it on, benefiting the criminal,” he said. “We’re not asking people to go out and tackle gangsters, only to report something where they have a suspicion.”

Security minister Ben Wallace said the Multi-Agency National Economic Crime Centre will target illicit finance.

Estate agents, high street solicitors and accountants who facilitate about £100bn of money-laundering in the UK but are failing to report suspicious activity face a crackdown under a government drive against economic crime.

Security minister Ben Wallace has warned public schools, football clubs and luxury car garages they must report irregularities, pledging to “go after the status” of the worst culprits by focusing on where they spend their illegal cash.

UK lawyers failing to report suspected money laundering, says watchdog

In an interview with one of the UK’s biggest Newspaper, he set out plans for the new multi-agency national economic crime centre launching on Thursday, which will prioritise the most serious offenders, boosted by a £48m cash injection and a more intelligence-led approach.

It was also said, “The ones who pretend their hands aren’t really dirty and profit from moving dirty money and knowingly conspire ... they’re cowards to pretend they’re nothing really to do with it. They are the ultimate. It’s like the BBC Russian McMafia TV Program, they comfort themselves by being at wonderful events and not getting their hands dirty, but their hands are as dirty as the person trafficking the child that they’re making their money from.

“We’re going to make sure that people who are proactively being facilitators are at the front of our queue as much as the actual nominals of the organised crime groups and we’re going to do everything we can to prosecute them.”

The government is also expected to toughen up its approach to Scottish limited partnerships, a business loophole that it believes has been used by foreign criminals to launder dirty money in the UK.

But the principal focus of the serious and organised crime strategy, published on Thursday, is the crackdown on illicit finance and the professionals who facilitate it. If they fail to report suspicious activity they face sanctions including, ultimately, jail.

Wallace said he wanted to prevent serious offenders from using their illegal cash to boost their reputations. “Part of that is going after the status. If all you can go shopping with is a Tesco Clubcard, you’re not really much of a gangster are you?” he said.

“If you’re denied your ability to spend your ill-gotten gains, if you can’t go and buy a flash car or a box at a sporting event or a nice house in Belgravia, if you can’t do any of that then you strip away the ability for them to launder their reputation.”

He added: “We will be going after the people who have not played their part in hardening the environment and reporting. So the purveyors of luxury goods, the public schools, the sporting institutions, who don’t ask many questions if suspicious people come along with cash or other activities, we will come down on them.”

High-value car dealers are regulated and so are required to file suspicious activity reports if they suspect money-laundering. Schools, although not obliged to report, are still subject to money-laundering laws.

The regulatory bodies for property, accountancy and the law have already been hauled in by Wallace and Treasury minister John Glen, who warned them that unless they did more to root out illicit activity, their members would face closer scrutiny.

The beefed-up response will include new specially trained police to improve and coordinate fraud investigations, more officers at the National Crime Agency to identify and seize criminals' money, and extra investment in data and intelligence assessments.

The government had been accused of not doing enough to tackle money laundering in the wake of the Panama Papers revelations, unveiled by organisations including the Guardian in 2016.

Wallace admitted that the system had not been responsive enough, but added that since then UK authorities had begun 68 criminal investigations, as well as seized £1.6bn in assets since 2010 and frozen hundreds of millions more.

He added: "Too many people have felt that security and prosperity are mutually exclusive and it's just not ...

Post-Brexit if we're going to make Britain and the City of London successful then it has to have a reputation for cleanliness and security."

Wallace said that the banks, which are responsible for 83% of suspicious activity reports, had more to do but were willing to play their part in the crackdown. It was the estate agents, accountants and lawyers that must make additional efforts.

"My point about small and regional firms is that you can make big ripples in parts of the country by taking action if you find out people have not been [reporting]," he said.

He warned that the public also had a responsibility to face up to the role they played in supporting organised crime, singling out bootleg cigarettes, nail bars and car washes in particular.

"Actually what they don't realise is that the 'wink, wink, nudge, nudge' is a guy who might push 10 packs of fags in that bar but he is [also] pushing a container and actually next week he doesn't bring in a container of drugs he trafficks some children," he said.

"It goes to the heart of how passive do you want to be? Those middle class people taking themselves into the nail bar in the local high street who don't think they're really fuelling organised crime, well they are. The point of this is that we all have a role to play."

Deutsche Bank, in a Last-Ditch Effort to Stop Its Spiral, Could Lay Off 20,000

Deutsche Bank AG (DBKGn.DE) will be cutting 20,000 jobs, or more than one in six full-time positions globally, the Wall Street Journal reported on Friday, citing people familiar with the discussions. The layoffs would probably take place over more than a year and would spread across regions and businesses.

Last week that the bank announced its plans to cut the size of its U.S. equities business, leaving only a skeleton operation in place to service corporate and high-net-worth clients.

If there is one thing that Deutsche Bank executives agree on, it is the efficacy of medieval medicine. Bloodletting, to be precise, Successive Chief Executives have bled the patient, but it hasn't recovered: profits remain disappointing, and the share price has continued to decline. So the latest incumbent is going to bleed it again – on a much larger scale. On Friday, June 28, the Wall Street Journal revealed plans to slash up to 20,000 jobs mainly in the US.

This would reduce full-time headcount to just over 70,000, the lowest since the financial crisis. The WSJ says the staff cuts will fall “across all divisions and business lines.” But the largest cuts are expected to fall on the investment bank and the troubled U.S. arm.

Deutsche Bank has been trying – and largely failing - to reduce its staff costs for years. It may surprise people to learn that despite repeated cuts, Deutsche Bank's headcount is significantly higher than it was in 2008. This is mainly due to the acquisition of PostBank in 2010, which added 18,000 employees. Back in 2016, Deutsche Bank announced plans to cut its headcount to 77,000, largely through disposing of PostBank. But when the PostBank disposal evaporated, so too did the headcount reductions. The bank now intends to integrate PostBank with its own retail bank, and says this will achieve “synergies” (i.e. cost savings). Presumably that will mean headcount reductions, though it is not clear whether these are included in the plans leaked to the WSJ.

But there has also been a gradual increase in headcount in other divisions, notably the investment bank. Frankly, given the bank's awful performance in recent years, it is hard to see what benefit this has brought. It looks suspiciously like empire-building to me. Or perhaps gambling. “Recruit some star performers, they'll soon turn this business round...”

Recruiting new people to liven up a loss-making business line is like painting go-faster stripes on an old banger. It doesn't make the car go any faster, and the stripes soon lose their luster. All too often, bright stars in a successful business become fading stars when they transfer to a failing one. The traders and analysts recruited at inflated salaries have not brought about the resurrection of the investment bank. They have simply cost it lots of money.

Deutsche Bank, in a Last-Ditch Effort to Stop Its Spiral, Could Lay Off 20,000

Deutsche Bank's high cost-income ratio isn't caused by clerks in retail branches. No, it is due to the insanely high salaries and bonuses Deutsche Bank pays to traders and analysts in its investment bank. And above all, it is due to executive management's head-in-the-sand attitude to business lines in terminal decline. In 2016, despite glaringly poor performance in its equities division, Deutsche Bank recruited more equities analysts. Now, it appears to be intending to sack them all.

Secondly – and even more importantly – cost-cutting alone cannot restore a business to health. Pruning is all very well, but unless the plant is fed and watered as well, it will slowly die. Currently, Deutsche Bank excels at nothing, and it faces stiff competition in all its core business lines. German retail banking is notoriously cut-throat and unprofitable, and I don't buy Sewing's "pivot" to wealth management and transaction banking. Deutsche Bank has some strength in transaction banking, but margins are being driven down by competition from fintech companies offering faster and cheaper payment services. And wealth management is a crowded field in which Deutsche Bank is far from the best – though I do wonder if Sewing plans to try the "recruit star performers" gamble in this division.

If Deutsche Bank is to escape from mediocrity, it will need substantial investment, especially in technology: its vast spaghetti-like heap of ancient IT systems seriously impedes its ability to compete with newer, more nimble entrants. Sadly, the level of technological investment that is needed does not seem to feature on the management's agenda. But without that investment, it is hard to see how Deutsche Bank can deliver the return on equity it has promised to its shareholders, however hard it cuts back jobs.

Since nobody has a better idea, this is unlikely to be the last round of cost-cutting. But eventually shareholders will ask when they can expect the patient to be fully functional again. And when they do, the management will have no answers. Their failure to define a clear strategy and invest in it will come back to haunt them.

It may be that something called "Deutsche Bank" will still exist in twenty years' time. But I suspect it would be a retail and corporate bank primarily serving the German market. As the UK Financial Times pointed out in 2017, this is what it used to be, before its fateful dalliance with American-style investment banking. Of course, this is not what the current management is telling shareholders, and nor is it what the current shareholders want to hear. They want the return of Deutsche Bank as it was in its golden years – a highly profitable, giant universal bank with a global footprint. But I fear that unless the management abandons medieval medicine and embraces 21st century technology, what they may end up with is the Deutsche Bank of longer ago – a quiet, sleepy little German bank.

Next year is Deutsche Bank's 150th birthday. What might have been a celebration is shaping up to be more of a wake. With its finances and strategy in disarray and 95 percent of its market value erased, the German bank's executives are putting the finishing touches on a painful restructuring plan ...

The New Scammers Tricks

More than three million people in the UK are the victims of scams every year. Many of them lose hundreds or even thousands of pounds, after being taken in by sophisticated scams and devious criminal gangs. This month is Scams Awareness Month, which aims to raise awareness of scams, and encourage people to be on their guard.

There are thousands of different scams doing the rounds, ranging from fake lotteries and prize draws to investment schemes, attempts to get hold of your financial details, and even tricks designed to get you to transfer your money into the criminal gang's bank account.

It's difficult to stay on top of each variation, so another option is to be aware of how these criminals tend to get into your home, so you can be on your guard.

Cold Internet Connections

This is still the most common way that criminals will get in contact through Skype, whatsapp, here are some of the very latest common scams run by scammers. This includes boiler room scams - which involve calling people and using high-pressure sales techniques to get you to invest in something essentially worthless. They take an average of £5,000 $7.000 from each victim, so they will put time and effort into convincing you that their scam is a legitimate investment.

Gold and Diamond

Lets start with the gold scammers, we have found that many scammers know that its impossible to use the old scam's by presenting pictures of gold and diamonds and ask the investor to help them with the cost of their taxes and carriage cost.

This might be the case 2 to 3 years ago but in most of the African countries there are real buyers on the ground that will cover all these cost, so their new tactic is to build up the investors confident by saying that their prepared to pay all the CIF cost, but the investor will need to cover the Hotel and refinery cost, in some ways this seems to be acceptable at the time, the good scammers will build up you confidence in discussions and even send you documents related to the CIF Shipment, until the 12 hour surprise which will come, where they will be asking for fund due to unforeseen circumstances.

Vishing

Another common phone scam is vishing - where they pretend to be from your bank, or the police, and warn you there has been fraud on your account. They then persuade you to transfer your money into a 'safe' account. If you do as they say, you are actually transferring your money into their account.

A variation on this theme is to tell you that there has been fraud on your account, so they are sending round a courier to pick your card up. They then take the card and go on a spending spree.

The best way to protect you from all of these is never to believe anything you are told on a cold call, and to hang up.

Review of the world's 8 biggest gold-mining countries

Gold is mined in around 90 countries worldwide. Some of the countries that historically have been top producers continue to be so, including Australia, USA and South Africa. But China is now the world's top producer, having increased productivity significantly since 2005.

Australia

Australia continues to be at the forefront of world gold production. From being the fourth largest producer of gold in 2008, Australia's production has surged to secure the country's position as the world's second largest producer of gold in both 2009 and 2010.

Western Australia is responsible for 75% of Australia's gold production and also hosts approximately two thirds of Australia's 4,500 tonnes of estimated gold resources. Western Australia's State Government received royalties from mining of some US$5.14 billion.

Australia has consistently been one of the world's largest producers of gold since its first gold rush, centred on Victoria in 1851. During the 1850's, Australia was producing some 40% of the world's gold. The immigration sparked by the rush, fuelled further agricultural and industrial development and saw nearly 500,000 people attracted to the state of Victoria.

As well as being the world's largest producer of gold, China represents one of the most significant markets for gold consumption. In 2011, China was second only to India in this regard with demand for 779.8 tonnes of gold, a 22% increase on the previous year. China is also a significant holder of gold reserves, currently behind only USA, Germany, the IMF, Italy and France.

60% of Chinese gold production comes from five provinces: Shandong, Henan, Jiangxi, Yunnan and Fujian. Although China has a large number of relatively small operating mines, consolidation has reduced the number of producing entities from 1,200 in 2002 to 700 at the end of 2010. The country's largest producer is Zijin Mining Company, whose Zijinshan Gold & Copper Mine is the single largest gold producer.

What is a conflict diamond?

Conflict diamonds, also known as blood diamonds, war diamonds, or converted diamonds, are defined by the United Nations as “diamonds that originate from areas controlled by forces or factions opposed to legitimate and internationally recognized governments, and are used to fund military action in opposition to those governments...” Essentially, these diamonds are mined and sold in war-torn areas, with the profits used to fund violent rebellions.

Where do conflict diamonds come from?

The vast majority of conflict diamonds come from countries in southern and western Africa. The first reports of conflict diamonds were published in 1998 by Global Witness, and revealed the role that diamonds played in funding the rebels of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) in their war against the government. Angola, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and Sierra Leone are the most widely mentioned countries of origin for conflict diamonds, although other African countries including Côte d'Ivoire, Zimbabwe, and Liberia have also been involved in the practice.

What's being done about it?

In 2003, the UN established the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme (KPCS) to prevent the proliferation and sale of conflict diamonds. The diamond industry is very serious about self-policing at all levels of the supply chain. All major rough diamond producers, exporters, and importers are now members of the KPCS, and any diamond dealer who is found to be non-compliant is often blacklisted. Their reputation is severely damaged, and dealers and jewelers will be very hesitant to do business with them. Despite criticism, the Kimberley Process has been quite successful in increasing sales of legal diamonds and discouraging the trade of conflict diamonds.

How many conflict diamonds are out there?

Once a diamond is cut, it is very difficult to tell where it came from. However, the number of conflict diamonds in circulation has drastically decreased over the past twenty years. At the peak of the Sierra Leone conflict, it is estimated that conflict diamonds accounted for between 4% and 15% of the global diamond trade. Currently, the World Diamond Council claims that less than 1% of diamonds are conflict diamonds.

How can I make sure my diamond isn't a conflict diamond?

Some retailers, like Brilliant Earth, specialize in conflict-free diamonds. If a jeweler is compliant with the Kimberley Process, he or she should be able to show you a diamond's System of Warranties statement. You don't have to avoid all diamonds from Africa; in fact, many of these countries rely on the legal diamond trade to finance schools, infrastructure, and growth. When diamond shopping, ask the store owner about the process it uses to guarantee its diamonds are conflict-free.

He or she should be able to confidently discuss the origins of the diamonds and gemstones sold at the store.

About The Format

Beginning January 2014, GIA's benchmark laboratory reports will have a new look. They'll contain the same trusted grading and identification data in an easier-to-read format. The reports will also contain enhanced security features and unique QR codes providing direct access to Report Check for quick report verification. The new reports consume less paper and other materials to help clients reduce their storage and postage costs.

Exchanging Reports for the Revised Format

The introduction of the revised format will not affect the validity of previously issued reports. If you'd still like to exchange your current report for one in the new format, GIA's Reissue Program offers a cost-effective way to do so.

Reports Qualifying for Reissue: Any prior version report dated on or after January 1, 2013. Reports dated prior to January 1, 2013 are subject to the standard update service and fees,

Reissue Fees:

Reports dated January 1, 2013 to June 30, 2013: $10 USD for Dossier; $15 USD for all other reports, Reports dated July 1, 2013 to December 31, 2013: No Charge

All requests for reissues at these special rates must be submitted by December 31, 2014, otherwise regular Update Service and corresponding fees apply.

How the Reissue Program works:

- Complete a Reissue Request form and submit along with your current report to any GIA laboratory or intake location worldwide
- You do not need to resubmit your gemstones
- Free shipping and handling
- Please allow up to 10 business days to process after report are received
- Reports issued in new format will carry the date of the original report
- If payment is required, you will be invoiced in the local currency of the lab where you submitted
- Reissue program expires December 31, 2014

Diamonds from the Pits to Dept

Several international mining corporations have established regional headquarters in Botswana and are looking for diamonds, uranium, gold and oil. Many have come back with positive results. Galane Gold Ltd announced that it has kicked off its first ore exploration from Tau underground in the northern part of the country.

Galane Gold or GG is a Toronto-based investment firm, an unhedged gold producer and explorer acting in mining operation and exploration in the Republic of Botswana. It is a publically traded company which is listed on both the TSX Venture Exchange and the Botswana Stock Exchange.

Galane Gold has already had several extensive exhibitions in the management of mining and exploring programs.

"This gold exploration is an expected evolution in order to improve the company's performance," GG said. The firm contributes with senior professional employees, who are committed to respect the environment and the communities in which they work.

At the beginning, GG didn't have the intention to pursue the resource of gold in Tau through underground mining. It started the project in the fourth quarter of 2013 and has finished its forced portal entry at the bottom of the existing Tau pit and the installation of the entire infrastructure required for the exploration.

The company has put a graphical presentation of the detailed mining plan on the reported resource to mine about 85,000 ounces of gold over the next three years.

Ravi Sood, the Chief executive officer of Galane Gold, stated, "This project is a major step in the evolution of the company both with regards to a change from open pit mining to underground mining and our plans to extend mine life through further exploration." He then added, "We have completed this project within six months and from our own operating cash-flows is a testament to the experienced management team that we have put in place."

Botswana is ranked as the best investment jurisdiction in Africa, according to World Bank Global Investment Benchmarking Report. According to the Fraser Institute Global survey of Mining Companies best African mining jurisdiction and the seventh best mining country globally.

It also has a strong economic environment. In fact, Botswana is regarded as the best mining country in Africa. It has political stability and strong GDP growth. Its status as an English speaking country is why Multinational firms such as Galane Gold can operate on its ground. The Australian firm, Gallery Gold, however, has also its entire exploration of Gold in the country. The company's most prospect exploration was the Mupane Gold Mine which officially opened in February 2005, will produce approximately 100,000 ounces of gold per year. Apart from that, Botswana is an emerging mining powerhouse.
